

INSTANT REPLAY

You get a text message from a female friend. It contains an attachment with a sexually explicit photo of another girl you both know. She's posing nude and sexy, like a porn model. Your friend doesn't like the girl and wants to circulate the photo with the caption "Ho."

TRAIN OF THOUGHT

Hold on now... I bet the girl doesn't know this is going around. She probably sent it to her boyfriend, but didn't expect him to share it.... How would she feel if she knew?... Why does my friend want to pass this around and call her a "ho?" I can't believe her. What is my friend thinking? Not only is it wrong, but she could get in trouble for this. Should I say something to her?... If I forward this to anyone else, I might get in trouble.... Do I have a responsibility to her to say something?... If I do, won't she be mad at me?...
What should I do in this situation?

OPTIONS

- ① Do nothing. It's none of my business.
- ② Tell my friend to delete the picture immediately. Try to convince her that it's wrong and disrespectful for her to be circulating it.
- ③ Warn her that it might even be against the law.
- ④ Discreetly tell the girl in the photo - directly or through a friend of hers - that her picture is circulating, and let her deal with it.
- ⑤ Identify another friend of ours who might agree with me and together figure out what to do.
- ⑥ Ask my parent, a teacher or a coach I trust, or another adult whose opinion I value to get advice on what to do.
